CARING FOR MILITARY CEMETERIES

(By Mary Macleod Moore.)

On Armistice Day the memory of those who died fills all minds and softens all hearts. In the two minutes of silence we commune with them again and recapture for an instant the sense of earnestness, realizing like Tyl, when he saw the flowers in the churchyard opening, "There are no dead."

Out in the old war zone you ever feel close to the beloved heroic dead, for the bare broken country is haunted by the memory of thousands who passed that way and are now commemorated by the crosses in the cemeteries.

The living are sweeping ever nearer and nearer to their deliverers. Men whose graves were lonely two or three years ago because they were set in the midst of desolation are accompanied this year by the people they helped to save, and little children place flowers on the graves of British soldiers who won back for them their homes.

The people of France and Belgium do not forget. They are too near the war and its effects. Not only are they reminded of our people as they pass and re-pass the cemeteries to the dead of the British Empire; but here and there all over the Western front they see the monuments of the Empire's men as well as to those of France and Belgium. Such, for example, as the memorial to the 9th London on Hill 60, and the monument lately unveiled at Monchy-le-Preux to the 37th Division.

In many of the towns and villages there are local war memorials either erected or in course of erection. They tell for the benefit of future generations of French and Belgians of the men "mort au champs d'honneur." Monuments upon which stands a "poilu," perhaps, or some tall, simple stone bears the laurel-crowned name of "Jenn," "Emile," and "Louis," each of whom "tombe pour la patrie."

In communal cemeteries where our men are buried the village people lovingly tend their graves, and on All Souls' Day the resting places of the "Ames" are covered with flowers. In one little village cemetery in Belgium I saw the graves of one Canadian, two unknown Italian soldiers who died as prisoners during the occupation, and several French refugees. All lie close together in the foreigners' corner, and upon all flowers were laid.

Monuments to the dead from Canada are to be seen in some places and as time goes on I suppose more will be erected at spots particularly associated with Canada. And it is probable that Canada will make a special effort on behalf of the Ypres League which aims at keeping at Ypres a Roll of Honor of all who fell in defence of that historic place, providing information about battlefields and cemeteries, and founding of hostel for visitors.

There stands in an open space one white monument telling of the valour of men from Nova Scotia who fell at Passchendaele. The inscription on the tablet attached to the stone reads:

"85th Infantry Battalion (Nova Scotia Highlanders), B.E.F. This tablet is erected by the battalion in memory of the gallant comrades who gave their lives in the operation before Passchendaele at Decline Copse and Vienna Cottage, October 26th to 31st, 1917."

The tablet commemorates one major, three captains, nine lieutenants and a long list of "other ranks" who "went West" in that terrible engagement. Canadians have heard much about the unveiling of a cross at Thelus Cemetery, Vimy Ridge, on Dominion Day by the Canadian Prime Minister. There seems to be an idea that this is a special Canadian monument. It is not, however. It is the great cross of sacrifice which is to stand in every cemetery where the British are buried. Fortunately, it was ready for erection at a time which had a special Canadian significance, and so it is associated with the birthday of the Dominion.

At the base of this cross, reached by fields where the young corn was waving, I looked at the wreaths which told of French friendship. A laurel wreath bore the words "Aux Héros Canadiens, Le Municipal de la Thelus," and another was a souvenir from the city of Arras.

In this cemetery there are the graves of many of those who fell at Vimy Ridge. One cross, marked by a maple leaf, is to the memory of Canadians killed in action on the 9th of April, 1917, and the unknown officers and men killed on that date are specially remembered. A sweet lavender bush scented the air near their graves.

In what was an open space but now is being built upon there stands the Vimy monument to the officers, commissioned officers and men of the Canadian Corps Artillery. Shell cases surrounded the monument and wreaths of flowers lay at its base.

Criticism is easy and cheap, so there are always found persons who ask what the Imperial War Graves Commission is doing to complete permanently the military cemeteries which are to be kept in order in perpetuity.

Some of those whose men fell think of the cemeteries still as bare lonely places of war days. Few are. Some are beautiful already. Men say bitterly that the war and the men who died are alike forgotten, but when you visit the war cemeteries you realize that here at least they are remembered and their graves honored.

For its sweetness and peace I shall remember long a little finished cemetery near Vlamertinghe. Here stands the Cross of Sacrifice, and the massive Stone of Remembrance, and the walls are being placed in position. The graves are levelled, and beneath the headstones is a border of bright flowers, while grass beautifully tended makes a lawn in front of each row. On each headstone appears the regiment, badge and religious emblem of the soldier, and at the foot of the stone the personal inscription allowed to the next of kin.

Some of these are touching in their simplicity. "Gone but not forgotten by Mum and Dad," reads one with its pathetic reminder of the reaching out of simple human love to one who no longer walks in the spacious fields of eternity. "I thank my God for every remembrance of you," said another while in bitterness of spirit someone had inscribed the words "If this be the fruit of war, pray God for wars to cease."

Cemeteries where permanent work is by no means completed are yet beautiful because of the care given to the grass and flowers. Such a one is to be found at Esquelbecq, close to the old No. 2 Canadian Casualty Clearing Station.

At Nine Elms, Poperinghe, also well kept, we came upon a party of gardeners working. At the gate stood one of the great motor vans labelled "Travelling Garden Party No. 6" and a crown with the initials "I.W.G.C." In these vans a number of men are moved from place to place with their tools and food, so that little time is lost.

Over 900 cemeteries in France and Belgium have been horticulturally treated and visits are paid to about 600 weekly. The gardening staff numbers, 1,148, all skilled men who work under the supervision of the Assistant Director of Kew Gardens, who is botanical adviser to the Imperial War Graves Commission.

Many cemeteries are now closed and bear the sign which tells that under no circumstances may any more interments take place therein. Others have ample room for the bodies which are still being found in the battlefields and buried with reverence. When I was in the war zone last year only three cemeteries were quite and the Le Treport. This year the following are either finished or almost finished—Wimereux Communal, Terlinthun British, Boulougne Eastern Etapes Military (with 11,000 graves), Les Baraques Military, Calais Southern, Lijssesthoek Military, Brandhoek New Military, Brandhoek Military, Hop Store Vlamertinghe, Vlamertinghe Military, Vignacourt British and Doullens Communal Cemetery (which many Canadians will remember).

The number of cemeteries in France and Belgium now out to contract for and in course of permanent construction is 111, and in these are over 8,000 Canadian graves.

Even where the cemeteries are not yet in permanent order, the Cross of Sacrifice is being placed in position. Already it stands in three cemeteries near Amiens, in eight near Albert, in nine near Arras, in five near Lens (including that at Thelus), in two near Valenciennes, at one near Frevent one near Lillers, at White City, Bois Grenier, Armentieres; and in seven cemeteries near Ypres.

In addition the Imperial War Graves Commission is now arranging to place the Cross of Sacrifice in Forty more cemeteries, close to Poperinghe, Ypres, Armentieres, Bethune, St. Pol, Arras, Albert, Amiens, Le Chateau, Lens, Cambrai and Valenciennes. Two hundred more are out to contract.

Over 20,000 permanent headstones are in France and Belgium, and about 130,000 are out to contract. As soon as they are ready they replace the old crosses.

I have only, so far, told of France and Belgium, of which I have personal knowledge. But in Egypt nine cemeteries are out to contract, and construction has begun in one at Cairo and one at Alexandria. In Palestine four are being put in order permanently. In Italy ten have been completed and four more are in course of construction. In distant Macedonia ten are soon to be finished, and in British East Africa one, while the Cross of Sacrifice raises its whiteness in Nairobi Cemetery (Kenya Colony). In Gallipoli there are 36 cemeteries out to contract.

On Armistice Day when we think with a sense of comfort of the reverently attended graves of our dear dead, let us remember also those whose bodies are marked by no stone for no man knows their sepulchre, and the men whose grave was the mighty ocean, whose memorial is found only in the hearts of a grateful people.

Macleod Utilities Show Surplus of $15,000.00
For Year 1921 ---- A Creditable Administration of The Town's Affairs For The Present Year

At the regular meeting of the Town Council held on Monday, November 21st, there were present Mayor Fawcett, Councillors McMichael, Morris, Macleod, Gardiner and Thewlis, and Secretary-Treasurer Brown.

After routine business Mayor Fawcett stated to the council that the cancellation of the Anderson subdivision had been accomplished. Also a report of delegates to the convention of the Union of Municipalities, held in Calgary, Nov. 16th and 17th, was heard. Councillors McMichael and Morris, the delegates, in their report, showed that the tendency of the convention appeared to be to discuss matters pertaining to town civic management.

At this stage of the proceedings the auditor's report for 1921 was tabled and discussed at some length. The outstanding feature of the report was the fact that the utilities showed a surplus for the first time in a number of years, electric light and power showing $1676.70 surplus, and waterworks $1239.00, a total surplus of $2915.70 up to the 31st of October. For verification of these figures read-ers are referred to the auditor's report as published in this issue of The Times.

Analysis of Auditor's Report and a Comparison

An analysis of the October statement for this year and a comparison with the statement of 1919 brings out some very agreeable surprises. Below we give some comparisons taken from auditor's report in question:

Power house operation accounts—this includes fuel, wages, oil, waste, etc. (expenditure):

1919	$26,284.98
1921	14,470.86
a reduction of $11,814.12. The revenue from the electric light department is $1040 more, while the revenue from the waterworks is $1875.18 greater than in 1919. This is due partly to a better check being kept on water users for lawns, gardens,

THE MACLEOD BRANCH CAN.

The Red Cross drive for membership which took place in June last will be in the memory of all citizens. One of the main objects was to establish interest in peace time work for the improvement of health, the prevention of disease and the lessening of suffering.

The I.O.D.E. took charge of the campaign and a special committee with Mrs. J. W. McDonald as president and Mrs. W. A. Gordon as secretary, secured some 260 senior members, and at the same time there was a good enrollment of scholars for the Juvenile Red Cross. This latter branch numbers some 18,000 members throughout the province and is doing wonderful work in looking after crippled children. The principal object of the Juvenile Red Cross ideal, namely to look after children less fortunate than themselves, is being most nobly carried out.

Subsequent to the closing of the membership campaign the local chapter of the I.O.D.E. combined to carry on the work which it has done for so long in looking after the many needs of the district so far as lay in its power.

Later, however, owing to the need for furnishing relief and assistance to the country districts, it has been felt that the work was getting too heavy for the I.O.D.E., which comprises only lady members, and that the present situation could probably be better met by the formation of a mixed committee.

It was therefore considered advisable to discuss the question of the formation of a local branch of the Red Cross Society, and the head office at Calgary was asked to send down a representative.

A well attended meeting was held on Monday, 21st inst at 3 p.m. at the Town Hall with Mayor Fawcett in the chair. Representatives of all churches, fraternal, women's and Farmers' organizations were present. The mayor in his opening remarks, referred to the Red Cross membership campaign already mentioned, and commended the present objects and aims of the society. He then called upon Colonel G. L. McDonald, D.C.M., the Red Cross representative, to speak on the subject of local organization and the best methods of handling the various problems of relief. During the past two months the Colonel has been travelling continuously through the drought stricken areas of the south country, etc., and the negotiation of a new water agreement with the C.P.R. which is very much more favorable to the town than the one previously in force. Under the heading of occasional sales for this year the sum of $2027.15 appears. This covers work done by the electrician wiring houses, also work done for private persons in the power plant workshop. In 1919 nothing appears to have been taken under this head.

These amounts total $15,726.85 and cover the first ten months only of the year. Such a saving as this in times like these seems almost too good to be true. Although the greater portion of this amount has been reinvested in the new machinery, the balance sheet shows a surplus of $1676.70 for electric light and $1239 for water. This is the first time in many years that the utilities have had a favorable balance, and we feel that the citizens should greatly appreciate the fact that the utilities have turned the corner and another milestone has been lifted from the neck of the taxpayers.

It will be borne in mind that the financial statement here analyzed is only up to October 31, 1921. November and December are the best revenue producing months, and at a fair estimate, with operating expenses deducted, these two months will show in the neighborhood of $5000.00 additional surplus to the credit of the utilities on December 31, 1921—making a total surplus for the year of about $8,000.00 in operation of Macleod utilities, totally excluding the amount re-invested in equipment, and which latter, amounting to about $7,000.00, should really be added to the surplus already shown, making at least $15,000.00 surplus over expenditure in operation of the utilities in 1921.

After discussion of the auditor's report the date of the annual ratepayers' meeting was set for Friday, Dec. 2nd, at 8 o'clock in the Town Hall. Bylaw No. 366 was passed appointing E. Forster Brown as returning officer for the municipal elections in December.

Adjournment.

1921 Administration Most Creditable To the intelligent observer who is in touch with the activities of the present council during its term of incumbency it would appear that the administration of town affairs has been conducted under strenuous conditions, along energetic and economical lines, and in the best interests of the ratepayers.

The successful management of the utilities as shown by the financial statement reflects great credit on Superintendent Vernon Pearson.

Among the matters of major importance which have engaged the attention of the council may be mentioned the cancellation of the subdivisions. The settlement of this question has been energetically pushed forward by the mayor and council, who in the early part of the year obtained the services of the subdivision commissioner appointed by the government and made such arrangements that all these lands, aggregating about 1500 acres, are now approaching the point where they will again revert to the status of farm lands and the title thereto will be vested in the town.

The question of title to the lands on which the public utilities and other public property stands has also been dealt with and a long drawn out effort made to get a settlement favorable to the town, and the matter has now reached a stage where satisfactory results may be looked for at an early date.

A determined effort is being made by the present council to have all work necessary to the placing in the hands of the ratepayers of the assessment and tax notices for the year 1922 completed at an early date, and hope is expressed that a graded scale of discount, for encouragement of early payment of taxes may be worked out favorably to the taxpayers.

Our information is that considering the difficult times we are experiencing, the collection of taxes has been very satisfactory to the town officers.

We would specially urge a good attendance of the ratepayers at the annual meeting to be held December 2nd, when a more comprehensive resume of the year's work by the council will be given.

Some mixed bales of clothing suitable for women and children are being dispatched from Calgary and will be distributed as quickly as possible, according to the needs of each case. It is hoped to secure a room in town centrally located in order to have a place for classifying and packing up the articles ready to send out.

When this has been secured it is considered probable that many citizens of Macleod may be able to help the cause by digging down into the hidden recesses of their wardrobes. The work that is being organized is purely to take care of local needs both in town and the country districts tributary to Macleod.

PLOTS AFOOT
FOR THROWN OF HUNGARY

Hungary's troubles have not been ended by the elimination of former Emperor Charles, but it is something to the good to have put an end to his aspirations. Some millions of Hungarians, no doubt, would have been pleased to have seen him restored and the probability is that the sentiments of the majority are monarchist rather than democratic. Certainly it was through no love of the Allies that Charles was deposed and deposed he was because Hungary had no choice and because Admiral Horthy, the regent, was glad of an opportunity of permanently and legally riding himself of a rival. There is little question that Horthy himself has eyes upon the throne. When he became regent in April, 1920, he made all the officers of the army take an oath of allegiance to him. Those who refused were deprived of their commissions. Horthy's power in Hungary today is not essentially different from the power of a hereditary monarch.

Two Groups

Though the masses of the Hungarian people are roughly divided into two camps, those who support Horthy and those who pin their hopes to the restoration of one of the Hapsburgs, they are a unit on one question. They are opposed to fulfilling the terms of the Trianon Treaty, which settled their boundaries and imposed on them their share of war responsibility and their debt to the Allies. Both factions desire to see Hungary made the Hungary of 1914, which could only be accomplished by annexing territory now belonging to Roumania, Czechoslovakia and Jugo-Slavia. They would gladly undertake a war if by so doing they could win back these territories and their polyglot populations. They believe that as the treaty was forced on them against their will, no moral turpitude would be involved in repudiating it, and this Hungary is likely to do if a favorable opportunity occurs.

Horthy and His Rivals

Horthy urged the acceptance of the treaty on the ground that it would give Hungary time to build up her army. He and his party are more openly reactionary than the Legitimists. The latter are composed chiefly of the old Hungarian aristocracy, while the Horthystists derive their strength from the lower untitled nobility, the younger army officers and the adventurous element that came to the front in the counter-revolution of 1919. The most dangerous of Horthy's rivals is the Archduke Joseph, who appears to be a born plotter. He was amongst the first to render the oath of allegiance to the Karolyi government in the revolution of 1918, and after the communist upheaval was promptly to the fore to assure Bela Kun of his adherence. When the Soviet was overthrown he made an effort to assume the regency, and might have succeeded had it not been for allied interference. So he now awaits another opportunity, building his hopes on his supposed popularity with the Hungarians, who are said to regard him as a Magyar rather than as a German.

Backed by American Money

Another candidate is Archduke Albert, son of the former Austro-Hungarian Generalissimo, the Archduke Friedrich. His mother is the Archduchess Isabella, a woman of great shrewdness, and he is backed by one of the largest private fortunes in Central Europe. The cash has been advanced by an American syndicate on the family estate. Archduke Albert is said to have as followers chiefly the anti-Semites, which have formed themselves into a powerful organization bearing some resemblance in methods to the Ku Klux Klan. He has also military support, and his chances are heightened by the prospect that he may marry the daughter of Horthy. If this were done the combination could easily frustrate any plans of Joseph, and if Horthy seemed in danger, it is probable that the marriage would be hastened. As long as the regent seems secure, however, he will probably make no alliances.

Flouting the Treaty

No people who fought as allies of Germany have taken their defeat with worse grace than the Hungarians. They make no secret of their determination to upset the Trianon treaty if they get the treaty, and many provisions of it they have openly defied. In the matter of army reduction, for instance, they should now have a force not exceeding 35,000, including officers, but they have at least 200,000 men under arms. There is an allied commission in Hungary to see that the army is reduced, but it appears that this commission merely accepts the statements of the Government on their face value, and makes no independent investigation. Soldiers are camouflaged as guards and customs officials, and recruiting offices are disguised as offices for the collection of statistics. These conditions cause grave anxiety in Roumania, Czechoslovakia and Jugo-Slavia. We find it suggested by a writer in the New York Times that the Magyar Royalists appear to have powerful friends in London and Paris, and that it is on this account that they are permitted to play fast and loose with the treaty.

THE EMPIRE SUPPLY OF TIMBER

Even if we do not accept the idea of a world timber famine, we must admit that never was there a time before in which the Empire depended more on its own efforts for its supply of timber, nor has there ever been a time more favorable than the present for urging the examination of our Empire resources and, if thought advisable, the definition of an Empire forest policy.—Lord Lovat, at Empire Forestry Conference.

MASTERSON'S
ADVENTURE

Not through violence, but still with his boots on, Bat Masterson died suddenly in New York a few days ago. For some years past he had been writing sporting comment for the New York Telegraph, and his comment was usually pointed. So far as we know he was not by without being forced to retract anything, for retraction was not in Bat's line. It was somewhat late in life that he became interested in sport. When advancing civilization put an end to what Kipling calls the king of sports—the hunting of man by man—Bat took up the next best thing, and for a while managed a fight club. He was an efficient referee of the school of Wyatt Earp, who used to enter the ring with a revolver in his pocket, and in his heart a determination to shoot the first gent who dissented from his rulings. Later on he was appointed a deputy United States Marshall in New York by Theodore Roosevelt, whom he had known in the West, and this position he held until he joined the staff of the Telegraph.

A Good Gunman

Bat Masterson was a gunman, but a good gunman. That is to say there is no evidence of him ever killing anyone who did not deserve to be killed. His pistol was drawn always on the side of law and order, so far as is known. When he was a boy, Bat, who had attained to great expertise with the rifle, and revolver, went to Kansas and there supported himself by shooting buffaloes for their hides. It was at this period of his career that he took part in the Adobe Walls fight, one of the classic adventures in the annals of the west. Bat and other hunters were at Adobe Walls when the place was surrounded and attacked by a band of Indians. They were roused early in the morning to see the scalp-hunters advancing swiftly upon them. Leaping to their rifles, they gave battle cry. Every one of them was necessarily an expert shot, and though they were vastly outnumbered they held the Indians at bay.

At Dodge City

The redskins did not easily give up their prey and the rich booty it promised, and a determined siege was maintained. But the hunters were supplied with food, ammunition and water, and wrought such havoc among the enemy that they eventually withdrew. It is said they also put to death the medicine man who advised them to attempt the massacre. When the buffaloes began to give place to cattle, Bat became a cowboy, and eventually drifted to Dodge City, Kansas. This young town was the end of the Texas trail. Cattle were driven to Dodge City, and then shipped east by rail. Here, too, the cowboys were as a rule paid off, and here were all the opportunities most of them desired for spending their money. Gamblers and parasites of both sexes haunted the place, and liquor flowed twenty-four hours a day.

A Strong Man's Job

Naturally, there were frequent fights, for everyone carried a gun, and most were proud of the use they could put their weapons to. The local cemetery was called "Boot Hill" because nearly every resident of it was interred with his boots on. It took a stern, quick shooting man to be marshal of Dodge City, and this is the job that Bat Masterson held for some time. His brother Ed was also marshal, but was shot by a gang of cowboys because he asked them to give up their weapons before entering a dance hall. Bat avenged his brother's death, killing one of the cowboys and wounding others. It was said he was never the same man again after the killing of his brother, his natural taciturnity being deepened almost to speechlessness by the tragedy. A younger brother was shot later, and Bat travelled from Tombstone, Arizona, to avenge him. He and his enemy opened fire on each other in the streets of Dodge City, but both were disarmed and rebuked by the mayor, who explained that the town was now civilized and gunplay was strictly against a local bylaw.

Figures in "Wolfville"

Many of Bat's adventures are to be found in Alfred Henry Lewis' delightful "Wolfville" stories. One of them, which is said to be absolutely true, describes the adventure of a lecturer in Dodge City. Bat, as marshal, was made chairman of the meeting and slightly alarmed the professor by laying a couple of revolvers upon the table before the exercises began, with the announcement that he was there to shoot the first coyote who interrupted. Presently there was an interruption and in a few seconds more the air seemed to be full of flying lead. The lights went out and in the confusion the terrified professor escaped. This was a typical practical joke of the west, one of those jokes that did so much to populate "Boot Hill."

Alberta Teachers and Canadian Book Week

During the week November 19-25 throughout Canada, schools, literary societies, patriotic organizations and all good citizens are invited to consider the claims of Canadian literature. A reprint of an article giving an outline of the development of Canadian literature by Miss Marion Lockhart is being sent through the mails to teachers and others interested. It is hoped that teachers will make use of the material contained in this article for a series of talks to their pupils during this week.

The Associated Publishers in Canada have decided to offer 500 Canadian book prizes for school essays on Canadian literature. Teachers who set essays on this subject are asked to send these they consider the best to Findlay I. Weaver, Executive Secretary, Canadian Authors' Week campaign, 253 Adelaide Street West, Toronto. The 500 best essays will be selected by a committee nominated by

When the essays are forwarded for competition, particulars as to the age of the pupil should be attached, as this information will be taken into account in awarding the prizes. December 31st, 1921, is the closing date for receiving essays. Alberta has a large number of men and women who have attained fame in the field of literature. Doubtless this essay competition will show that amongst the boys and girls in the public and high schools there is latent talent that will help us to develop our place as a literary people.

Winning Essays On Benefits Of Irrigation

During the first of October A. D. Ferguson offered a prize of a Waterman Ideal Fountain Pen for the first essay on the benefits of irrigation—one for rural school pupils and one for Macleod public and separate school pupils. Considerable interest was excited, and on the close of the competition on Oct. 31st the winner for Macleod was Mattie McFadden, and for rural schools George Lane Olsen, Coulee school. Following is the judges' award and the winning essays:

Judges' Award

The judges, after a very careful consideration of the various essays, reached their conclusion and award as follows:

Town schools—First prize, Charlie Lane, Olsen Creek school; honorable mention, Jessie Bailey, Ewelme school.

Some sixteen essays in all were submitted, and the judges were very pleased with the interest that has been taken by the various school teachers and pupils, and take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of Mr. Ferguson's effort to arouse interest in the subject.

Dorothy Macintosh of Howe school had a very excellent essay in the competition, and in the opinion of the judges it ranked among the highest, but owing to her father being one of the judges it was decided to eliminate this essay from the competition.

minate with the moisture, but without which it would wither and blow away. This grass forms a mat over the ground to protect that soil from the driving winds, while the roots form fibre. This is the only real remedy for soil drifting.

It must also be remembered that no soil can be expected to retain its fertility unless something is put in to replace that used by the growing crops. This is almost useless under the dry system, as the amount of moisture is often below that required for the chemical action which is necessary to take place, and the only permanent system is that where fertility can be maintained.

Large amounts of alfalfa can be grown under irrigation, and this, apart from being a profitable crop is an enricher of the soil because of its quality of gathering plant food from the air and storing it in the soil. The prairies in the dry parts of the world are usually without trees of any kind, and this affords no protection to the animals, buildings and the land. It also leaves the settlers without firewood, fence posts or poles of any kind. But trees are like any other plants—they will not grow without plenty of moisture. Irrigation makes possible the growing of trees, and apart from other advantages, this adds greatly to the appearance of the home.

Then, too, smaller farms bring all the comforts and conveniences of community life, while large and unproductive farms rob the people of these because they are widely scattered and far from neighbors and friends.

By the system of irrigation large tracts of land which were useless in their natural state have been reclaimed and are now fruitful sources for the world's need, and the home of thousands of prosperous people. As an example of what may be accomplished by applying water to the proper kind of soil, we may look at the State of California. Great parts of this state are of sand, which in its dry state would produce nothing; but under irrigation it is one of the wealthiest states of the American Union.

To farm under this system means of course, increased labor, but it has also the advantage in that it gives the farmer control of the moisture in his land; for it often happens in the wet climates that crops are destroyed in the harvest time because of the excessive rain, and this is greater loss than not to produce a crop.

Such climates are usually more subject to early frosts and severe winters while in dry areas, generally speaking, stock can live out on the open ranges nearly all winter.

These are some of the apparent benefits of irrigation, although it is only by actual practice we can hope to fully understand its workings.

MATTIE L. MCFADDEN.

THE BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED FROM IRRIGATION

Irrigation is artificial means of bringing water onto the land. It is carried out in all parts of the world in many different methods. In Egypt the people depend upon the overflow of the Nile. In the floods they bank up the floor plains, so that the water will flow into them. Then they can let the water out as they want it. This is a method used in parts of South China, too.

Irrigation is carried on in China, Japan, England, and United States. Many methods are used. One method that is used in China, Japan and the United States is to run a main canal or ditch from a lake or river and run lateral ditches from this main ditch. In this way a great area can be irrigated at once.

The method used chiefly in England is to place poles in the ground about a rod apart, pipes are then placed on the top of these poles and water is taken from one part of the field to another. This method is used also in British Columbia in the fruit lands. But it is so expensive that it is not carried on extensively.

Another way of irrigation is to place tiles about six inches below the ground. The moisture is then brought up the surface by capillary action.

There are many other ways of irrigation. But we are most interested in the way it is carried on in our district. A main ditch is run from a swift stream or river and lateral ditches are run from this main ditch. In this way hundreds of acres can be irrigated at once.

Irrigation is a very necessary thing in a dry country for agriculture. It makes a better wheat kernel; it also makes the bran, shorts and flour of a much better quality; also there is larger quantities of straw grown for the livestock.

Irrigation helps fertilize the soil. It brings the mineral food from the river for the plants and also helps dissolve the plant food that is already in the soil—for a plant can only take the food that is in liquid.

Irrigation plays an important part in keeping the soil from drifting. It will be noticed that when soil is moist it compacts and therefore the wind does not blow so much of it away.

In Alberta, especially, in our district, there are large deposits of alkali. With irrigation these deposits may be completely removed.

Irrigation acts in a small way upon the climate, for when the soil is moist the air becomes saturated with moisture, and when a slight falling of temperature occurs we may have rain.

Irrigation helps kill the plagues, such as beetles, cutworms and grass hoppers. For it is noticed that these insects always infest the knolls where the soil is driest. If there was an abundance of moisture these insects would not bother the crops so much.

Irrigation is a very good thing for the live stock, for with the abundance of moisture there will be an abundance of hay and pasture.

With the help of irrigation the country's produce is very great and it can ship large quantities of live stock, grains, butter and cheese. When a country ships out so much produce it brings more money into the country; therefore irrigation helps to increase the trade and commerce.

When irrigation is carried on in a country it soon becomes rich and prosperous and settlers come in to settle; therefore irrigation helps to increase the population.

Irrigation is a great benefit to the working class, for with irrigation in the country the farmer is always sure of a good harvest and he will need laborers to help him gather it, and the government will also need men to keep the irrigation works in order.

In the construction of these irrigation ditches the country needs learned men such as carpenters, contractors, surveyors and engineers. Soon young men become apprentices to these and in turn become skilled mechanics. Therefore irrigation benefits education.

Thus we see the great need of irrigation in a country where the crops are not sure. We hope to find our country, thus benefited by irrigation, thriving, with herds of good conditioned live stock. This system will take a large amount of money, it is true, but we are looking forward for the time when all this, and many times that sum, will reward the country for the time and money spent.

ROMANCE OF INTRIGUE

An opulent romance of intrigue, conquest and mystery is the description applied by its producer to the new J. Parker Read, Jr.-Associated Producers production, "The Leopard Woman," starring Louise Glaum. The picture, from the well-known novel of Stewart Edward White, comes to the Empress Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

"The Leopard Woman" tells the story of the adventures in trackless Africa of John Culbertson, scientist-explorer, and a strange, beautiful woman, known to him only as Madame, who puts herself in his way to hinder him in the execution of an important mission for his government. Culbertson is stricken blind by the sun as he crosses the veldt. His attempts to regain his sight by means of a drug which only the beautiful Lorelei, known to him as the Leopard Woman, is able to distinguish from one that will blind him permanently, form a dramatic episode of the story. Eventually he defeats her, but not until the Leopard Woman, his sworn enemy, has given him her heart.

ALICE BRADY FORSAKES SMART SOCIETY DRAMAS

Realtar Star Will be seen in series of Plays of Humble Life

After five years of successful stardom in society dramas, which have ranged all the way from tense emotionalism to high comedy, Alice Brady has temporarily, at least, forsaken the drama dealing with the smart set, and will be seen in a series of at least three dramas of humble life.

The first of these, "The Land of Hope," a collaboration by Frederick and Fannie Hatton and Robert Milton, presents the popular star in the role of a Polish immigrant girl who seeks her fortune in America along with a little company of people from her native town, including her childhood sweetheart.

The young lovers think all their troubles will end when they reach America, and that they will quickly earn enough to enable them to marry. But, alas for their optimism! they have many difficulties, disillusionments and misunderstandings before they gain a firm foothold on the new soil, and win happiness together.

The role of the Polish youth is ably handled by Jason Robards, who played juvenile lead with Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'" for two years, but resigned to devote himself to picture acting. Others in the cast include Ben Hendricks, Jr., Schuyler Ladd, Larry Wheat, Betty Carsdale, Martha McGraw, Fuller Mellich and Bernard Siegel. The production was directed by E. H. Griffith.

"The Land of Hope" has been billed for a two-day run at the Empress Theatre, beginning Friday.

"THE LEOPARD WOMAN," GREAT LOUISE GLAUM DRAMA, TO APPEAR HERE

Famous Star Has House Peters as Leading Man in New Read Picture at Empress Theatre

She had a duty to perform—and she was determined to kill the man she loved in order to accomplish that mission. But when the man had bested her at every point in the game, when he had cheated this leopard woman, as he had named her, of his life, and she knew her cause was hopeless, she surrendered to the inevitable.

The leopard woman yielded to her beloved enemy only when he had forced acknowledgement that, even though blind, he was her master. It is a conflict between the male and female of the species that Stewart Edward White wrote into his favorite novel, "The Leopard Woman," which, in J. Parker Read, Jr.'s screen version, of which Louise Glaum plays the title role. It is an Associated Producers' production, and has its local premiere at the Empress Theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

John Culbertson, secret emissary of a large European power, arrives in Bajuma, a city at the edge of the African veldt, and on his way to the savage kingdom of M'tela. This kingdom is the goal of two opposing governments—each seeking an alliance as a first step toward future conquest.

Also in Bajuma is Madame, secret agent of the rival government, seeking M'tela's favor, and who has dispatched her to destroy Culbertson in order that her colleague, who has previously started for the savage empire, may reach it unopposed by foreign power. Madame is as beautiful as the leopard—most beautiful of Africa's jungle creatures—a restless spirit of stealth and cunning, ever searching dim trails in quest of unsuspecting prey. Hence her name, "The Leopard Woman."

An attempt is made on Culbertson's life in Bajuma. Unable to learn the identity of this would-be assassin, Culbertson forms his safari (desert caravan), and pushes on toward M'tela, the Leopard Woman following. By accident they are thrown together. She knows that he is destined to be her prey, while he is not aware of her identity. Her safari has missed a water hole. Culbertson offers aid, but she scorns him. Seeking, however, to impede his progress and lacking the courage to kill him, as she has sworn to do, she delays him with a ruse. They are thrown together for days, then one evening when the tropic twilight has faded before the glory of the star-jewelled night, she realizes that she loves him, and her mission is swept away with the awakening of her heart. At first he accepts her love, then he scorns her. In a fit of rage she orders her man Chake to kill Culbertson. The servant returns reporting his mission accomplished. Then comes remorse; she mourns for the man she loves.

But the servant did not kill Culbertson and again she faces a seemingly indestructible foe.

"On to M'tela" is Culbertson's cry as he plunges through the gruelling heat of the veldt, but his progress is short lived, and he is blinded by the torrid sun. The leopard woman has him at her mercy, yet hates the grim purpose of her government, the torture of this brave man self doomed by eternal darkness. Finally, repentant, she makes possible the restoration of Culbertson's sight.

Culbertson reaches M'tela's kingdom in advance of his enemies, and the Leopard Woman, who had set out to destroy him, finds a haven in the arms of her erstwhile foe.

THE MONTH OF BLUES

When drear November comes around With whirling leaves and darkened heavens, And rubbish, lying on the ground, Is all at sixes and at sevens, Then fills the eye with wistful tears And specimens of alley-sweepings, And we regret the vanished years In more or less poetic weepings.

The waves are sobbing night and day, Winds howl like wolves (or some such varmints); The skies assume a neutral grey Much like our heavy undergarments. On grasses brown the rain comes down, Tempest the breast of Erie ruffles, And almost everyone in town Appears to have a case of snuffles.

O vanished summer! Vain regret For days ere Boreas blew and blustered! O, sodden ways, where feet get wet And must be soaked in baths of mustard! O, wretched month—tears and rain When birds forget the joy of living Yet have to write and thrills of pain Their annual verses of Thanksgiving.

What can go through wood without touching a twig? An echo.

A LEAF FROM THE CONFERENCE BOOK

Enemy, let's you and I Have a Hating Holiday; We can both, if we but try, Lay our enmity away. Don't expect that I shall love you— But I'll promise when we meet, That I will not try to shove you Off the street.

I won't try to spoil your fun, You will cease to knock my game; Each shall spare the other one Public obloquy and shame. I have wasted time and money On you, as you have on me— Which is rather sadly funny, You'll agree.

Enemy, for once we'll join Forces for efficient ends— Let us spend our time and coin, After this upon our friends; You will never call me brother, I won't beg you for a kiss— But, leave us lay off each other After this.

Which is the best way to make a thin boy fat? Tap him on the back and he will look round.

WHY NOT READ CANADIAN BOOKS?

(By A. R. Morgan)

No art so truly interprets the life of a nation as its literature. What does it mean to us that we live in the home of our fathers if we have no record of their deeds, no picture of the fives they lived, and if the unfolding of our country's history is not invested with the charm of romance? As for our newer citizens, come from all parts of the earth, should they not become familiar with our traditions?

School(By W. A. McKee, widely known lecturer and author, and a national authority on juvenile problems.)Caught by the pinch of hard times and drop in wages, thousands of young people of the cities are now struggling to find a way to get back into school.The percentage of youths who quit the grammar school two or three years ago under the lure of high wages is very large. They are now caught on a limb, short on general education, weak in versatility and low in capacity to create a place for themselves.The entire country should turn with sympathy to these all but helpless young men and women. They are usually adult in body, but undeveloped as to latent resources. There is much that can be done to bring up their retarded abilities. But before offering suggestions of relief, let us mark sharply the point at issue.The basic idea here is this: The essential quality of a good education, is not merely the ability to get a job at big wages. It is a form of self-reliance and resourcefulness for getting on whether wages are high or low, whether jobs are many or few.
It is distinctively a creative capacity.
If he cannot obtain a ready made job the really educated young person goes out somewhere and creates one. He sees something that needs to be done and shows somebody how it can be done, and immediately he is wanted.
Now that easy money is gone, let us see what can be done to help the army of stranded, young people get back into school, there to finish developing their capacity and inner resources.Any youth out of a job and short on education should be alert to find a place to work for his board and lodging while attending school. Let him tend furnaces, do the heavy work about the house or work part time at any more common labor position.
That of itself is education. The dodger and the irresponsible youth will fail even here, but the boy who is absolutely reliable as furnace tender, as chauffeur, or a man of all work will easily find a place and more easily hold it.Likewise the girl drifter—who now is legion in the big cities—this worried soul can quickly secure a place to serve about a household while she finishes her schooling. She needs only to be true blue. She must cheer up assume an air of certainty, show a readiness to be helpful wherever needed and soon bring her employers to appreciate her.But more schooling is the thing here sought, and it must be obtained even at the cost of much patient sacrifice and duty. Finally the reward will be assured. It may be day school, night school, technical or business college, or mere "opportunity school."The youth cannot at first realize his inner growth in capacity to get on in the world any more than he can feel his body grow. Nevertheless, the ordinary common school course gives him gradually an enriched inner development that may later put him in line for half a dozen positions where he formerly had but one or none.

FOREIGN LOAN TO MEET
REPARATIONS PAYMENTBERLIN, Nov. 21.—A communication handed to the reparations commission by Dr. Wirth, the chancellor telling of the German government's willingness to seek foreign credits required to meet the January reparations payment to the allies, has been received by the public as confirmation of the belief popularly held that the government possesses no illusions as regards its liability to secure a period of grace in which to meet its obligations. The commission left Saturday for Paris without answering the communication, but in official quarters the belief is expressed that reply will be forthcoming from Paris.Although the heads of the foreign office are reported to have made strong efforts to impress the members of the commission with the international and external effects of a forced entry by Germany into the foreign money markets, it is asserted that the commission's have declined to suggest other measures of relief for the country.The Reichbank's statement for the week of November 15, which was published on the eve of the departure of the commission for Paris, announced the addition of 2,500,000,000 marks in new paper to the national currency, bringing the total to more than 102, 000,000,000 marks, of which 7,000,000, 000 is in loan bank notes. The present heavy output of fresh paper money has been all the more conspicuous as it occurred in the mid-month period.
Speculation has been stimulated as to the total at the close of the year.

"IF WINTER COMES"

If the weather makes me snivel, if I sort of shrink and shiver—
If I can't be sweet and civil, since I'm feeling like the Devil, Will you blame me for this drivel?If my words are vitriolic and my thoughts unapostolic—
If my actions are symbolic of the chilblains and the colic, Do you ask that I shall frolic?If my temper's rather huffy and my nose is more than snuffy—If my breath is short and puffy and my conversation stuffy, Shall my verse be sweet and fluffy?Nay, expect no grazioso from a man who's lacrimoso—
All my melody's meadoso, all my airs are doloroso,
When I'm feeling only so-so!Oh, I'm miser'ble as hello, and my life is sore and yellow—
Do you think a frozen fellow who desires to weep and bellow
Can awake the lyre, or 'cello?Winter, wild and wicked wizard, blew a bleak and blasted blizzard, Cut me through from A to Izzard, knifed me, razored me and scissored
Snippets from my lungs and gizzard!

ing, it is not thought the damage will be great. Smoke working completely through store and into Osborn's book store on the east side of Ashdown's has caused some damage to the stock in the book store.

The fire was still burning fiercely at noon in what was once the big Woolworth store, and in the upper floor of the Royal Bank building, Fire Chief Smart said he was confident that his men now had the fire under control. Having burned out completely the east side of the Woolworth store and failing to get through the double fire wall on that side, Ashdown's was considered entirely safe.

BRITAIN CANCELS CONTRACTS FOR FOUR HOOD BATTLESHIPS

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The admiralty announced today that it had ordered the cancellation of work on the four battleships of the Hood type. The shipbuilding firms were notified yesterday not to incur any further liabilities on new naval construction until further notice from the admiralty. These contracts were awarded only two weeks ago.

Officials explained that the practical effect of the admiralty's order would be the absolute cancellation of all work on warships pending the outcome of the Washington conference.

Clyde Shipyards Receive Order

GLASGOW, Nov. 18.—It is officially stated that the contracts awarded the Clyde Shipyards for the construction of three warships of the Hood type have been suspended. The steel works are also affected by the suspension.

The plans of the British admiralty for capital ship construction appear to have modified from time to time in the three years since the war, as the lessons of that conflict were worked out, and the state of the building program is not quite clear on the records.

There were originally four ships of the Hood class, only one of which, the Hood herself, was completed. Begun in 1916, she was launched late in 1918 and completed in 1920. The other three ships, all of a highly powerful cruiser type, were designed to meet the lessons of Jutland, work on them having been stopped in March, 1917.

It appeared from London despatches in August last, dealing with admiralty construction plans, that four new battle cruisers were to be turned out as improvements over the Hood type, to take the place of the obsolete ships. Their completion by 1925 was expected. These ships were to be probably have been the most heavily armed in the world, carrying 10 to 12 16-inch guns each in their main batteries. The Hood has a main battery of eight 15-inch guns, and her normal displacement is 41,200 tons.

TORTURED BY PILES FOR YEARS; RELIEVED BY INTERNAL BATHS

If you are troubled with piles, constipation or biliousness, don't begin taking drugs.

If you bathe internally with the J. B. L. Cascade you will find yourself always bright, confident and capable. Poisonous matter in the lower intestine is the cause to which a score of common ailments may be traced.

Mr. A. M. Steele, Cupar, Sask., writes: "I had been troubled with my stomach. Piles and constipation for years until I had become very thin and looked 20 years older. A leading doctor in Regina told me that the main canal was badly ulcerated. I gradually became worse until one day, when purchasing a threshing outfit from Mr. Russell of Regina, Mr. Russell noticed my condition and said: 'I can cure you. Get a J.B.L. Cascade.' Well, I did so, and the first night I used it I slept all night for the first time in weeks, and in a short time felt quite myself again. It also cured my piles, which had troubled me for years."

The internal bath is a simple and easy treatment, by the application of warm water. It should be available in every home.

The J.B.L. Cascade is the only perfected appliance for internal bathing. It is shown and explained at A. D. Ferguson's, Druggist, Macleod, Alta. the president in Winnipeg. Hon. Mr. Smith succeeds Charles Stewart, former premier of Alberta, who resigned from the directorate when his party was defeated in the provincial election.

AN INTERESTING COURT CASE

An interesting court case came up before Mr. Wm. Knight, J.P., at Claresholm, on November 18th. Information was laid by the Forest Rangers under Section 2 (c) of the Regulations for Dominion Forest Reserves, against Messrs. J. J. Vance, Alex and Wallace Bell, Thos. Etherington, John Armstrong and Fred Collier, for cutting and removing timber from the Crown Forest Reserve without authority.

Considerable interest was shown in the case in view of the fact that some of the accused had timber permits, but neglected to observe the conditions of the permit with reference to the location of the cutting of green timber which had not been marked for removal by the forest officers.

Mr. Chas. F. Adams, K.C., of Calgary, acted as prosecuting attorney for the Department of the Interior, and the necessity of requiring that the conditions of sale of timber be strictly adhered to for agricultural and protective reasons was clearly brought before the court. The Magistrate dealt with the matter in a very able manner and in addressing the accused pointed out clearly that the permits on Dominion forest reserves were privileges granted only under certain conditions which were to be fulfilled. Upon special request of the forest officers only nominal fines were exacted of $5.00 and costs for each of the six offenders. It is expected that this will have the salutary effect desired by the officials of the department.

ASPIRANTS FOR SEATS IN 235 RIDINGS ARE ENTERED IN THE RACE

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—Candidates for Canada's fourteenth parliament were nominated today in the 235 federal constituencies of the Dominion, and the most complex political battle in the history of the Dominion entered into its final phase. Three-cornered fights will be common in every province. In a number of constituencies there will be four, five, and in one case, even six candidates, to contest for one vacancy.

Never in a federal election before have there been four distinct parties in the field, and apart from the official party candidates, independent candidates are well in evidence. Quebec has around 30 of them; Ontario and the western provinces have a number. Possibly some will fail by the wayside before election day on December 6. But many of them will not doubt remain, tending to split the vote of the old line parties. The election will also be the first with women candidates. But women candidates will not be so numerous as was thought might be the case. At the time of writing there are but four in the field—two in Ontario, one in Manitoba and one in the province of Quebec.

Where Fight Lies
Today's nominations emphasize that Ontario, with its 82 seats, is the central battleground. In almost every riding there will be a Conservative, a Liberal and a progressive to contest the issue. The prime minister and Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, both return to Ontario this week to renew their campaign. Hon. T. A. Cressy, leader of the Progressives, plans to spend the time remaining before election day in Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but members of the Drury government are carrying on the Ontario fight for the Progressives.

Fourth Party
The Canadian Labor Party, which was organized only in August of the present year, and forms the fourth party, has comparatively few candidates in the field. The issue, taking the Dominion as a whole, will lie between Conservatives, Liberals and Progressives.

FREIGHT RATES CUT 10 PER CENT ON DECEMBER 1

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—A general reduction of 10% in freight rates on all steam roads under the jurisdiction of the board of railway commissioners will go into effect on December 1, it was announced by Chief Commissioner F. B. Carvell late Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Carvell explained that the reduction was not a straight 10% off the present freight rates, but was to be deducted from the increase in rates made effective by the order of the board issued during December, 1920, when the increase of 40% in the east and 35% in the west, made effective Sept. 13, 1920, was reduced to 35% in the east and 30% in the west. The forthcoming order will further decrease freight rates to a basis of 25% in the east and 20% in the west above the rates effective prior to the first increases in September, 1920.

The order will also provide for a decrease in all sleeping, parlor and Pullman rates of one-half of increase granted in 1920.

NEGOTIATIONS WITH EGYPT BREAK DOWN

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Although British official circles decline to comment upon the termination of negotiations with the Egyptian delegation until Adly Yeghen Pasha, head of the delegation, reports to the sultan, it was learned authoritatively today that the delegates departed for Cairo last Saturday convinced of its failure and anticipating the return of unrest and internal disorders in Egypt when the results of the London negotiations are announced.

The reason for the failure of the negotiations which were originally designed to accord self-government to Egypt, is ascribed by some critics to unwillingness of the foreign office to carry out the recommendations made last February by Lord Milner, former colonial secretary, who urged in a report to parliament "that the promise of self government cannot be postponed."

The London press generally attributes the breakdown in the negotiations to the question of British military representation, but the Egyptian viewpoint is stated as being favorable to British supervision of the Suez canal zone and that an agreement would be possible regarding British military authority in other parts of the country.

The question which produced the deadlock in the negotiations is understood to have been that of diplomatic representation abroad and of Egypt's desire to have similar representatives appointed to that country from foreign countries. The Egyptian delegation considered that the British offer meant less than Egyptian independence on a basis of self-government.

PRINCESS MARY OF ENGLAND IS TO WED

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The betrothal of Princess Mary, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary, to Viscount Lascelles, was announced this evening.

Viscount Lascelles is the eldest son of the fifth Earl of Harewood and was born on Sept. 9, 1882. He was A.D.C. to Earl Grey during the latter's term as governor-general of Canada. He served during the war and was wounded.

Princess Mary is the only daughter of their majesties, King George and Queen Mary and was born on April 25, 1897.

Many Congratulations
Meanwhile expressions of gratification of the engagement are coming from people in all parts of the empire. Congratulatory messages were pouring into Buckingham Palace today from every direction, bearing affectionate expressions of loyalty and good wishes from all ranks of the British unity.

A large crowd assembled outside the palace this morning in hopes of greeting the princess when she drove out. Meantime the Irish Guards band played bright and tuneful selections in the court and the palace during the customary changing of the guard, which occurs daily when the royal family is in town.

Engagement Pleases

satisfaction at the engagement of Princess Mary to an Englishman, and equally approve her choice of a husband in the Viscount Lascelles. It is emphasized that there would have been general disappointment if she had married a member of foreign royalty and thus have left England, where she is universally popular.

Her choice, says one newspaper, "will suit the democratic and romantic instincts of the British people and the modern views of monarchy in an age when the dynastic principle is under reconstruction. The engagement of the Princess makes it easier to believe that the Prince of Wales in his turn will make a marriage which will appeal to the same romantic and democratic sentiments of the nation." This is typical of many of the comments.

IN GOD'S ACRE

In the night the flowers bloom O'er the graves where shines the moon,
All are sleeping in His care,
For God himself keeps watching there.

In God's keeping they are safe,
In the morn the day doth break,
God will be a friend to each,
Peace is rest and rest is peace.

Some have come from o'er the sea Bearing burdens just as we,
Strangers once—but neighbors now,
All at His decree doth bow.

He will know them by their name, Though a stone marks not their grave,
He gives them rest—their works have ceased,
And so they rest—in God's sweet peace.

Macleod War Memorial Committee Asks For Important Information

Below is a list made from such records as we have on hand of those who were killed in action and died of wounds in the Great War, 1914-18. As we are very anxious to get a complete and correct list as soon as possible in connection with the proposed war memorial, with anyone who knows of someone who should be included on this list or any name that is on the list and should not be there, please advise Mrs. Ray Baker, Macleod, secretary Joint War Memorial Committee.

We wish to have this memorial erected this year, and subscription lists will be started immediately to raise the necessary $1000 needed to complete the fund, and we have no doubt but that the people of Macleod and district will be generous as far as lies in their power financially so that work may be started on this soon.

Macleod and district killed in action and died of wounds in Great War, 1914-18:

JAPAN STUMBLING BLOCK TO U.S. PROPOSAL TO LIMIT BIG NAVIES

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A manifesto issued today by the Labor party on behalf of the whole labor movement of Great Britain promises support of any steps that may be necessary to make the Hughes' proposals for naval armament reduction effective, and calls for the extension of the proposals to all forms of armament.

Almost without exception the London weekly reviews, most of which appear on Friday, eulogize the Washington conference and especially the Hughes proposals for a naval holiday.

Referring to Japan's objections to the proposals, the Spectator thinks that this will constitute the crux of the whole conference. "If Japan agrees to a naval holiday," says the Spectator, "which we must admit will maintain her relative naval inferiority to Great Britain and the United States, she is certain to ask to be compensated for giving up what she believes to be a good chance of securing command of the seas."

The Spectator says Japan, if she is frank, will say that her navy was not built for self-defense, but in order to secure her rights in the Far East and on the Asiatic mainland which she considers as her's by virtue of her military and naval prowess, her growing population and her expanding trade.

The Spectator considers that Japan must be given reasonable satisfaction "but we must also make clear to her that what we want to bring to the world is peace and not a new type of sword." Incidentally, the Spectator expresses the belief that what really matters at the conference is the cementing of blood and brotherhood between Great Britain and the United States.

The Saturday Review thinks sober reason is required to judge the Hughes' plan, and says: "There is doubt as to whether a treaty embodying it will be accepted by the senate."

Peculiar Conditions
The Review says peculiar conditions will be created by the proposals. At the end of 10 years, two British and six United States ships will be obsolete. The United States' six may be replaced, but the British two may not until British total tonnage may have fallen below 500,000. The control of the sea must thus pass to the United States.

The paper says the scheme cannot properly be judged until the practical regulations whereby it is to be in force are available.

"Seriously," the Review asks, "is this a time to play tricks with our navy, and, by abandoning four battleships to throw thousands out of work and also to prevent the proper training of our personnel? To the nobility of aspiration which inspired the United States' scheme we can give our most generous recognition, but it is with facts and not aspirations that we have to deal."

How Hughes Won
The Nation says that Mr. Hughes frankly adopted parliamentary methods "against babbling platitudes and secrecy which prevailed at Paris" and considers that he won the public opinion of the world at large and especially in Britain.

The New Statesman also emphasized the change from diplomacy of the Paris peace conference, where, it says, Wilson was first asphyxiated and the outwitted to the open diplomacy of Washington, where Hughes put all his cards on the table.

GERMANY MUST HAVE A CHANGE OF HEART

LONDON, Nov. 22.—In commenting on Premier Briand's speech before the Washington conference, London morning newspapers follow the respective attitudes which they have maintained toward France's policy in keeping a big army. There is one section of opinion which sees in France a militaristic revengeful spirit, and another which is constantly distrustful of Germany and consequently regards France as justified in keeping prepared for a possible attack.

The Times, always sceptical as to Germany's actual disarmament, says: "With a chronic menace hanging over her, it would be criminal folly for France to relax her vigilance" and referring to Secretary Hughes' remark about safety for the institutions of liberty, says: "The institutions of liberty will not be safe until Germany

GENERAL REMARKS BY THE AUDITOR:

All expenditures appear to be properly vouched for and legally authorized. The failure to meet debenture payments appears to be owing to the excessive quantity of dead assessments, but the apparently unavoidable delay in rendering tax notices had a considerable influence in producing that result, at least prematurely.

Under the new equipment of the Power House plant and economy in operating same, both electric light and waterworks show surpluses for the ten months. Only part of the new machinery has yet been paid for, but for the purpose of equalizing the cost I have apportioned one-third of the outlay to date, as the Engineer informs me that the full cost will be covered within the period of three years and these utilities placed on a paying footing within that time.

undergoes a change of heart."

The Daily Mail comments in a similar manner, and the Daily Telegraph is also sympathetic with France's position.

The Daily Chronicle, on the other hand, assures France that, although the United States senate turned down the suggestion for a joint American English guarantee, she can count certainly upon the support of both of them in the event of German aggression.

The New Autumn Blouses

(By Ruyta Stuyvesant.)

The new autumn blouses conspire to make one's tailored skirt a part of a smart costume, so cleverly are they designed. Overblouses that stop at the hips, banded models likewise worn outside the skirt, and stunning blouses tucked inside the skirt band, are all represented in the smart shops. To accompany a navy blue suit there is an attractive blouse of navy georgette, with sleeves and trimming of flame crepe. The blouse assumes the lines of a jumper, and the under-blouse is of the red. Of course, the sleeves are loose and flaring to conform to this season's silhouette, and the front of the blouse is arranged to form an embroidered vest effect when worn with the jacket of one's suit. This is a slip-over model, finished with an elastic at the bottom, and is allowed to blouse over the skirt Russian style.

If you are too conservative for the flame-color sleeves an trimming, you might have a blouse of navy, combined with sand or pumpkin yellow. French blue and navy is well liked, and so is grey with navy and silver embroidery trimmings. The suit of tan tricotine or twill will require a blouse of harmonizing shade, and for this one might use a sand-colored Canton crepe, with dark brown combination. The blouse itself might be of brown crepe, with sleeves and embroidery of the sand, so that one could have the vest effect of the brown rather than the tan. Other blouses that show the waistcoat effect are created from georgette, brocaded in velvet and combined with plain georgette. Harding blue is popular, and one blouse of this shade had a brocaded panel at the front and back and great sleeves of georgette cut right out from the waistline. This blouse was worn outside the skirt and came down on the hips for several inches. It was provided with a sash at the sides drawn snugly and tied at the back. Chiffon, velvet and crepe are being used in smart combination for good-looking blouses. Black velvet panels front and back are provided with loose sleeves of cream net over a foundation of cream georgette. The velvet is slit at the front to show a bit of lace underneath, and the blouse is provided with sash ends that tie on either side.

Knitted and crocheted articles may be dry-cleaned for the first time by rubbing on flour, meal or cornstarch. Rub this in well with both hands, then shake the flour out.

FAKES AND FAKIRS

So many worthless hair preparations are flooding the market today that the public is naturally dubious and skeptical about trying anything else, the idea seems to be to get the money easily and quickly, no thought of merit seems to enter into the matter at all.

Intelligent people know that hair cannot be grown on bald heads; they also know that grey hair cannot be restored to its original color by rubbing some decoctions on the scalp. When the roots of the hair are dead nothing in the world will make hair grow, also nothing but a dye will restore the natural color to grey hair, science has long since proven these statements.

"JUSS" (Harrison's special hair Tonic and dandruff Eradicator) will not grow hair on bald heads (when roots are dead) neither will it restore grey hair to its natural color, nothing but a fake will do these things.

"JUSS" will however kill dandruff, stop falling hair and promote a new growth providing there is still life in the roots. "JUSS" is a scientific clear amber spirit mixture, delightfully perfumed and a real pleasure to use, made by two druggists with years of experience, it has proven a veritable sensation. More "JUSS" is being sold in Alberta than all other hair Tonics combined.

Get your bottle today and see what a truly wonderful preparation this is—remember it is absolutely guaranteed.

All Macleod druggists sell "JUSS"—$2.00 per bottle (a month's treatment).

DIETETICS AND DIETITIANS

I've been going to town two days a week to take some lectures and laboratory work on dietetics, and have found the subject, the teachers and the class all most interesting. Taking the last first, the pupils are of every variety from a fluffy-haired eighteen-year-old with very short skirts and very narrow eyebrows, to a grey-haired elderly woman with the alert air of an observant bird. A girl who sits beside me has a name known throughout Canada. She is a most serious student and agrees with me that food is so important a matter that it is beneath nobody's dignity or mental attainments to study it seriously. And she, like me, has had much chafing on the subject of her "cookery" lessons.

Though, as the lecturer points out, the study of food values is something more than "cookery," something on which all our physical well-being and much of mental and moral well-being is based.

I know all the objections to this sort of a study and have "objected" them scores of times myself. There's a fine equipment with which one works in such classes, for one thing, and for another, I've tasted dishes made by domestic science teachers that were perfect in appearance and texture, browned to a turn, most appetizing to look at, but flat and unpalatable to the taste, a flaw which I always attributed to the measuring of seasonings instead of tasting the product before it is finished. But these are mere superficialities, it soon becomes evident, beside the important matter of supplying the body with everything needful for health and efficiency.

I fully believe in measuring things, realizing at the same time that in a household where odds and ends must be used up each day, there must be almost daily experiments in which there can be no measurements to guide one. In matters of seasoning, too, the strength of the condiment, as well as the taste of the partaker, will often vary, and all rules must be sufficiently elastic to allow for this.

Human nature is such that the balm to our vanity in being told something we already know gives quite as deep satisfaction as the learning of something new. So it doesn't in the least detract from the interest of the laboratory work to find that many of the things are done just as we have always done them. It is immensely interesting, however, to learn the reason behind these more or less automatic processes.

I have always, for instance, made cocoa by boiling together first the cocoa and water, adding milk just a few moments before serving. I think I did it chiefly because the milk, otherwise, sticks so unpleasantly to the sides of the saucepan. But, in the class and laboratory I found that, with a sediment which is precipitated to the sides and bottom of the utensil, goes the calcium which is one of the most valuable constituents of milk. Whenever milk is boiled for a longer period than five minutes, or if it is cooked at a lower temperature for a greater length of time, the calcium becomes insoluble and is so precipitated. The only way one can get it is by scraping the sides of the pan, and then it is doubtful if it is of the same use to the body as in its original form. In thickened milk dishes, custards, corn starch and the like, the calcium, though rendered insoluble by excess cooking, does not sink to the bottom. So one gets it, though in changed form.

When Has a Woman The Right to Vote

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—When has a woman the right to vote? This question is being generally asked in Canada today, especially in view of the recent amendments to the Dominion Election Act, which give women a wider share in political affairs than formerly.

Under the present act, as amended in the last session of parliament, any woman who is a British subject of the full age of 21 years, and who is not prohibited for any reason, has equal rights with men in holding election offices; being a candidate for the House of Commons, and in voting.

Foreign women who were not born in North America, but who through marriage become British subjects, do not have the right to vote, despite their British citizenship, unless they secure a certificate from a judge certifying that they possess qualifications entitling them to become naturalized. Any foreign woman, who has been personally naturalized, but who has acquired the status of a British subject through marriage, can nevertheless not vote, unless born on the continent of North America, without a certificate of qualification from a judge. This means that if an Italian woman, born in Italy, becomes a British subject by marrying a Canadian, she would not be entitled to vote in the Dominion elections. But in the same woman happened to be born in the United States, or even Mexico, and acquired British citizenship through matrimony, she would be entitled to vote because of her citizenship and without the qualifying certificate demanded in the case of the woman born outside of North America.

The same rule applies to any woman born in North America, and outside of Canada, who secures British citizenship through marriage, no matter what her race, creed or color. Any woman born of foreign-born parents in Canada is a natural born British subject, and neither needs to marry nor secure a certificate from a judge in order to cast a ballot.

Prior to the latest interpretation of the Dominion Election Act there was one rather curious anomaly with regard to women voting. This rule, interpreting its formal phraseology carried the meaning that if a Canadian woman married an American resident in Canada, she would be unable to vote because of her loss of British nationality. It also carried the meaning that if an English-born woman married an American resident in Canada, she would be able to vote despite her lost British nationality. Colonel O. M. Biegar, chief electoral officer, overcame this apparent discrimination against former Canadian women by ruling that neither had the right to exercise the franchise.

Aside from the question of naturalization there are other rules which women must observe before being allowed to vote, although these rules apply equally to male voters. The person must have resided in Canada for the year immediately preceding the date of the issue or writ of election, and must have ordinarily resided in the electoral district in which he or she votes for the two months immediately preceding the polling day. Women as well as men, may not vote who in the province in which they desire to vote, are disqualified by their particular provincial laws from voting for a member of the legislative assembly. Prisoners undergoing punishment for criminal offenses, patients in lunatic asylums, persons maintained partially or wholly in municipal poorhouses or houses of industry, persons who are inmates of any charitable institution receiving provincial government aid and those persons disfranchised for corrupt or illegal practices cannot vote.

PEARLS OF GREAT PRICE

By far the greatest pearl fisheries of the world are situated between the Island of Ceylon and the mainland of India. There in the Gulf of Mannar are high, submarine banks on which the water is only from 30 to 50 feet deep. On these the pearl oysters breed. For several years there may be practically none. Then will come a year of enormous productivity, in which the young oysters are found to the number of 10,000 to a square yard.

To these fishing grounds in March and April of each year the fishers come from all the coasts of India, the Persian Gulf and Arabia, and on the sand between the jungle and the sea build a shack city of 40,000 or 50,000 inhabitants. Day by day hundreds of boatloads of oysters are brought to shore and piled in great heaps to rot under the tropical sun. Then they are shovelled into dugout canoes, water poured in, and the whole rocked back and forth to separate the pearls from the decomposed animal matter of the oysters. Into this fetid mass the natives plunge their hands and arms, and out of this indescribable stench and corruption their trained and sensitive fingers draw pearls of lustrous beauty and great price.

Sometimes the pearls when discovered have flaws in them which mar their beauty and lower their value. Often skilled men will buy these defective pearls in the hope that a little peeling and dressing will remove the flaws and make them of great value. A few years ago a poor Tamil laborer saw such a pearl offered for sale. By utmost effort he scraped together the price, 75 rupees. A little peeling removed the flaw, which was only on the surface, and beneath the outward defect was a glorious pearl, which he sold for 900 rupees.

Twenty-five years ago a young man, a friend of ours, went to India to seek pearls. He was an American, a university graduate, known to many students of Canadian universities. His name was Sherwood Eddy. Strange to say, he did not go to Ceylon. Instead, he went to Calcutta, where no one had ever thought of fishing for such pearls before. The fishing grounds he chose were the schools and colleges were 50,000 Indian students were studying the English language.

At first he was not very successful. He succeeded in taking only three pearls and they all had flaws which spoiled their beauty and seemed to make them of little worth. Here is who they were and their defects:

The first was a poor, low caste boy named Azaria. His caste was so low that they were not allowed to enter a temple where the other castes worshipped. They were not permitted to even worship the idols of their own land. With trained eye and skilled hand Mr. Eddy set himself to dress and cleanse this defective pearl, and under the Master Workman he succeeded. Today Azaria, the low caste, is the first Anglican native bishop of India. His diocese has more than 60,000 Christians. A pearl of great price!

The second was an outcast boy, Santiago Paria. He was lower than the dogs. Down Brahman Street the dogs could go at will. But Santiago Paria and his people did not dare to set a foot on the street where the high castes and the priests lived. Again the pearl trimmer went to work and succeeded. In Southern India there is a strong native church. It is composed of a half dozen Presbyterian, Dutch Reformed and Congregational missions united into one, and has many thousands of members. Two years ago the Moderator, the highest officer of that church, was Santiago Paria, the outcast. A pearl of great price!

The third boy was a poor Syrian lad whose people had settled in India centuries ago. To the proud Brahman he was a despised foreigner. With him, too, the pearl expert was successful. Flaws and blemishes were trimmed away and the pearl uncovered. Today he is bishop of the reformed Syrian church in India, and when the pearl fisher who found him went to visit him recently he was able to assemble together in one congregation 30,000 people to listen to the benefactor of his boyhood. A pearl of great price!

Three pearls of great price! "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls; who, when he found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it."

So said Jesus. So did Sherwood Eddy. Did he not make a good bargain?

Red Cross Notes

Through the co-operation of the Provincial government the Red Cross Society has been able to complete plans for the reopening of the hospital at Foremost. The institution was closed owing to crop conditions in that district, and the people requested the Red Cross to take it over.

The Provincial headquarters of the Red Cross are this week sending nurses and supplies, and the institution, which has a capacity of nine beds, will be reopened under their administration.

The Provincial Headquarters is still busy sorting and dispatching clothes to the areas where relief is needed. Officials said today that further donations of old clothes will be thankfully received at all times. They should be sent to the Provincial Headquarters, Red Cross, O'Sullivan Block, Calgary.

MARTINMAS

The good St. Martin, scholars say, Derived his name from Mars; Let pedants mutter as they may, And prate of evil stars— We'll junk the war god's battle cars And throw his sword away, And start to heal his ace-long scars On good St. Martin's Day.

For on his day, three years ago, An armistice began That shall, if we but will it so, Outlast the life of man; And those today who meet to plan The devil's overthrow May make a bridge of peace to span The world's deep gulf of woe.

O smash the spears and scimitars, And give the guns to flame— Break down the senseless iron bars Of immemorial shame! And mark the day for endless fame When underneath the stars The good St. Martin overcame The tyranny of Mars. —Ted Robinson in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

We are always trying to give you good value for your money, knowing how difficult it is these hard times to make the monthly wage hold out, and especially to the farmers with families, who have to wait many tedious months for a crop of anything. What will especially interest you with growing boys is a hole-proof cloth made into suits—all sizes. The idea is this: Where the action of the elbow causes friction, that is where a hole first appears. Also, where the boy's pants show wear first is in the seat and knees. This is met by a reinforced piece of double cloth in knees and seat. The finishing of the garment is by another lining of cotton, which takes off the friction of the materials. Mothers know, however thin the lining is, what a wonderful help it is to the garment. On these goods we are only putting on a profit of half what storekeepers would ask in prosperous years. This is a slashing cut of half profit. Then, your girls want a winter coat, or the mother does. Well, we got you a beautiful selection of blanket cloth in six different shades, in short lengths, so that the whole town of mothers, aunts and sisters won't be dressed alike. To let you see how easy it is to make up a fashionable coat with the Butterick patterns, we picked out a rancher's wife who is handy with her needle to make up four girls' overcoats and ulsters. It is remarkable how well she did it—you would swear they were tailor or factory made. This was possible by the Deltor system of the Butterick pattern. The system is so easy that even the Indian mothers are making garments by the patterns.

Meighen government were appreciated by the large number of people present.

The Hockey Club dance held on Wednesday evening last was successful in every way, with the exception of the small attendance, which no doubt can be attributed to the severe cold weather we are having, also to the large political meeting held on that date.

A splendid billiard tournament is now being keenly contested at the Macleod Club. Those who were fortunate enough to win their games are now on the third round and F. Seymour, who is playing top notch billiards, and who should win the handicap, has reached the fourth round. The following are still in the tournament: F. Seymour, N. McCaig, G. H. Johnston, O. Fansett, V. R. Baker, C. K. Underwood, G. Pollard, S. Dillingham and T. Pringle.

Official word has now been received from military headquarters by Colonel Metge that the drill hall and military quarters for the local battery are to be in the building formerly known as the American hotel. These quarters will make splendid training grounds for the local boys and also recreation and reading rooms will be fixed up as soon as possible. It is understood that Major R. F. Barnes will succeed Colonel Metge as officer commanding the battery.

H. H. Young was very badly frost-bitten whilst driving a few nights ago. He was making a trip to Larson's camp when something went wrong with the car. Mr. Young got out to fix the engine and while doing so had his ears practically frozen solid. On his arrival home Dr. Kennedy was called in and administered medical aid. The unfortunate man is still confined to the house, but is progressing satisfactorily, although it will be some weeks yet before his ears are better.

A reception was held at Mrs. C. K. Underwood's on Monday last in honor of Mrs. Naismith-Courlette of Toronto. The guest of honor, who is on a tour of Western Canada obtaining data and material for her new book, which will be published in the near future, is an old college friend of Mrs. Underwood's from Ireland, and they had not seen one another for over 14 years. Mrs. Naismith-Courlette speaks very highly of the West and especially the Western people. Putting it in her own words, "It reminds me more of the hearty and warm welcome extended to one in poor but dear old Ireland."

It's time to take off the screen windows.
